QU'APPELLE CEMETERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PROGRESS:

SIR,—I notice in your last issue a letter over the signature "Pat" on the above subject, evidently the effervescence of an overheated brain during the recent semi-tropical weather, but as the untruths contained in his letter might possibly be credited by sober minded people it is necessary to refute them.

Pat states that the cemetery lots are sold at $10 apiece and that at least $150 must have been paid by various parties, now judging by this I doubt very much whether "Pat" has ever been near the cemetery at all, for there have only been seven interments since the cemetery was opened which at $10 per lot would only amount to $70, probably "Pat" was too much overcome by the heat to visit the cemetery or my office to obtain particulars, or else it suited him better to hatch out his grievance in his arm chair. As a matter of fact the purchasers have only bought half a lot each which is all that is necessary for a burial lot for which they pay or agree to pay $5 and on payment receive a deed similar to that of a town lot. For the satisfaction of your readers I may say the total receipts to date have been $20, and the total disbursements have been $64 made up as follows: Paid to T.
Thompson, D. L. S., survey and preparing plan for registration $62; Paid Registrar's fees, $2; so the Trustees are still $44 out of pocket.
"Pat" or anyone else who takes sufficient interest in the matter to call at my office is welcome to inspect the accounts.

That pressing need exists for at least a portion of the cemetery to be fenced at once I am well aware, but unless public spirited gentlemen like "Pat" will come forward and purchase lots in order to place funds at my disposal for this purpose some other means must be devised. So far from there being any grievance against the Trustees in this matter the reverse is the case, they have donated the land for this public purpose and execute deeds free of charge, while all the funds realized are to be devoted to the improvement and maintenance of the cemetery. Under such circumstances they are surely entitled to receive the amount of their cash expenditure.

Now "Pat" if you cannot keep cool try a change of air.

Yours truly,
LESLIE GORDON.
Agent for Trustees Qu'Appelle Townsite.

The Toronto Mail, in speaking of the efforts being made in some sections of the Territories to have the prohibitory clause in the Northwest Territories Act repealed says:
"The agitation will not meet with much favor at this end of the Dominion, there being a strong determination here to keep the young North-west sober and respectable.
But when the Territories set up for themselves as provinces they can do as they please."

The Imperial Federation League held an important conference in London. Many Canadians and Australians addressed the meeting.
Sir Alexander Galt urged the formation of a customs union among the Colonies. He said he did not see why, if Canada entered confederation for mutual defence, America should not do likewise, making English-speaking nations one free and prosperous community.

MORE YANKEES SEIZED.

A telegram from Shelburne states that the Dominion cruiser Terror this afternoon formally seized the Portland fishing schooner City Point, which was forcibly detained at Shelburne yesterday for an alleged violation of the fisheries treaty. The vessel is to be taken into wharf at once, but the authorities will not strip her, but will await instructions from Ottawa.

Halifax, July 4.—The American schooners Geo. W. Cushing and C.
B. Harrington were formally seized yesterday afternoon at Shelburne by the captain of the Dominion cruiser Terror and handed over to the collector of customs at that port for violation of the customs laws. The C. B. Harrington was ordered into the hands of constables who were placed in charge of her.
The Cushing still rides at anchor along side of the Terror, but is in charge of the collector. Neither of the three vessels seized at Shelburne, the above two and the City Point, are charged with violating the fishery laws, but were simply seized for violating the customs laws by coming to anchor and allowing their crews to go ashore before reporting at the custom house. The collector telegraphed to Ottawa for instructions, and has received a reply to detain them and send further particulars, which he did, and is now waiting the decision of the department as to the amount of fine to be imposed in the several cases. Capt. Quigley, of the Terror, says he found the vessels under the circumstances above stated, and the captains of the seized vessels admit such to be the case, but say they purchased no bait although the latter intended to do so; having understood from several American papers that they were entitled to do so. A Yarmouth schooner entered Shelburne yesterday afternoon, and Captain Quigley ordered her name and port of registry to be painted on the stern, which was immediately done.

POUNDMAKER DEAD.

Gleichen, July 5.—Chief Poundmaker died suddenly yesterday afternoon at the Crowfoot camp by the bursting of a blood vessel.

Poundmaker was a prominent leader of the rebellious Indians at Battleford and Cut Knife in the late rebellion. His History is well known to all readers. It will be remembered that he surrendered at Battleford, was tried and sentenced at Regina to a long term at Stony Mountain; but owing to ill-health the clemency of the Executive was enlisted and he was accordingly released about three months ago.
He returned to his tribe near Battleford, but remained there only a short time, evidently finding home life rather monotonous after his period of notoriety among the white men. He accordingly set out for the Blackfoot reserve, and has been a constant visitor of Crow-foot's ever since.

THE ELECTIONS IN THE "OLD COUNTRY."

CONTRIBUTED BY LEN.

The electoral contest in the United Kingdom is now being actively waged, and from day to day the wires of the ocean telegraphs flash the news of victory, or defeat, to multitudes anxiously awaiting the result of the struggle.

The present election differs materially from its predecessor, in that the issue at stake is of national, as distinct from personal, party, or local importance. It is no longer a question whether Gladstone or Salisbury shall be entrusted with the Government, whether Conservatives or Liberals shall predominate in the House of Commons, or whether the agricultural laborer shall or shall not have "three acres and a cow."

The subject now submitted for decision to the electors is simply Union or Separation for Ireland. Upon one or other of these platforms will the votes of the people be recorded.

On the one side we see embattled the Protestants of Ireland, the Conservatives of the three kingdoms, and those Liberal and Radical voters who follow the leadership and principles of such tried and well known names as Harrington, Goschen, Trevelyan, Chamberlain, and Bright. On the other side are arrayed the so called Nationalists or Parnellites, and those members of the Liberal and Radical parties, who through good and evil report, pin their faith to the prestige and prowess, of the indomitable Premier.

Truly, it is a giant contest that Mr. Gladstone is waging, almost single handed, against the Unionists, comprising the flower of the nobility, the wealth and education of the Kingdom.

The Press, the fourth estate of the Empire, has with all but unanimous voice declared against him. The London daily press, and the provincial newspapers are doing their level best to support the Unionist Candidates. In Scotland too, the leading Liberal journal, the "Scotsman," holding in this country an influence accredited to the "Times" in England, has withdrawn its support from Mr. Gladstone's movement, and urged the Scotch electors to revolt from their allegiance.

It seems marvellous that with such odds against them, the Unionists should not only attempt the struggle, but hope to succeed. Their confidence is based upon the unrivalled way which Mr. Chamberlain has hitherto held over the masses of the people. He is now using his persuasive eloquence to raise a struggle between class and class, by appealing to the people for "Justice to Ireland" against the opposition and persecution of the Whig and Tory Oligarchy.

That Mr. Gladstone has thus purposely raised a false issue we do not doubt. So far as we can judge by their spoken and written opinions, the Unionists are as desirous as the Separatists to do justice to Ireland, provided injustice be not thereby dealt to the other portions of the Kingdom and Empire.

Can such men as John Bright, Chamberlain, or Trevelyan, be seriously accused, or suspected of assisting to maintain in Ireland a foreign and despotic government, or of supporting an aristocratic oligarchy against the true interests of the people. Mr. Bright asserts that it is because the scheme of two independent national Parliaments in the United Kingdom is unworkable and impracticable, he has raised his voice against it. There does not exist a single Unionist of intelligence, be he Conservative, or Liberal, who would not concede to Ireland as well as to England, Wales, and Scotland, the largest measure of local self government, consistent with the retention of the supremacy and integrity of the Imperial Parliament. Mr. Gladstone's proposals go beyond this limit, and for this reason, and for this alone, he now stands face to face at the hustings with the solid phalanxes of loyalty, patriotism and reason, opposed to him.

It is too early as yet to forecast the result with certainty; but, unless the "vox populi" be strangely disguised, we anticipate that Mr. Gladstone will at last learn to his cost, that "leaps in the dark" are not always successful, and that, veteran politician as he is, he has on this occasion failed to gauge aright the sentiments of the British electors.

THE INDIAN PROBLEM.

By Geo. B. Elliott.

Seeing that the Indian question is one which is yet taxing the ingenuity of the statesmen of the American Republic to solve, it is not a matter of surprise that Canadians should find it a vexed question, on which is surrounded with difficulty, and which in spite of what may be called prejudice must be more or less solved in the light of the experience of our neighbors.

Not long ago President Cleveland in his inaugural address referred to the Indian question on the frontier as one which called for the most enlightened statesmanship, for let it be remembered that the Indian policy of the United States Government was not until recently conducted with that regard for the advancement of the Indian that is looked for from the Government of an enlightened nation, and therefore the change inaugurated by President Cleveland has been hailed with no little satisfaction by those who are honestly interested in the advancement of the Indian on the frontier.

From the manner in which Mr. Cleveland has addressed himself to the reform of many long standing abuses it seems most likely that his recommendation for reform in Indian affairs, will if they have not already done so, bear most excellent results.

Though the Canadian Government did not until recently address itself in a far reaching manner towards solving the Indian question in the far west, yet the records furnish abundant evidence to prove that the policy in the past no matter how defective it may have been was dictated by humanity and an honest desire to protect the nomadic ways of the country from the abuses which had become notorious with our far west neighbors.

The insurrection of last year, however, woke up the Dominion Government to the fact that the plan would have to be remodeled. Much of the old system would have to be abandoned, and the Indian would have to be taught habits of industry slowly and with especial patience.

It is true that the industrial schools for Indian boys and girls are not an outcome of the insurrection, because these schools have been in operation for some time, and I am sure they are doing a most excellent work, though the effects of the training they impart will not be realized until another generation shall have arisen, but their influence is not lost on the adults who though finding themselves unable to obtain the benefit of these schools, yet admire the improvement which they afford their children.

It is here the Indian cannot be brought to the school, but in a certain sense the school can be brought to the Indian. He can be taught a few of the most useful and industrious arts, and in this way his condition will be greatly improved. Much success has not resulted from the efforts made by the Government to make him a farmer or an agriculturist. The details of such an industry are too numerous for the red man to conquer, and all the details of farming in the Northwest must be observed even in such a productive country as the Northwest is if success is to be achieved. There is one branch of agriculture to which the Indian takes naturally and that is raising stock. He is fond of horses, and I have often thought why not give him an opportunity to raise stock, horses and cattle, especially the Blackfeet and Bloods who inhabit a stock country, and who as it is are not indifferent stockmen. I do not claim originality for the suggestion, because this idea has already been seized upon by the United States Government, and great hopes are expected from its fruition.

The Indian of the present generation of adults must always make an indifferent agriculturist, but there is nothing to prevent him from becoming a successful stock-raiser. To the former he takes with great reluctance; to the latter with ease and even delight. His pastoral life is his delight, and although he may not make a stock connoisseur, there is nothing to prevent his raising good, serviceable animals whether for the plow or the block.

There would, I think, be less difficulty in teaching the Indian stock-raising than pure farming itself, because, like the white man, the Indian should as far as possible be permitted to pursue that industry for which he has the most inclination. Major W. E. Gibbon, late of Montreal, and who was recently appointed Inspector of Indian Agencies, and who is now engaged in the discharge of his duties believes that compulsion will have to be used to make the children attend the Industrial Schools, of which already there are quite a number. These schools will have to be increased, and better teachers employed than have been engaged in the past, and white children should be permitted to attend these schools, and thus exercise a beneficial influence on the Indian children. The appointment of Major W. E. Gibbon to that of Inspector of Indian Agencies, will, I think, have a most beneficial effect. His well-known zeal in the course of the advancement of the Indian will be generally exercised on their behalf.

When in Calgary a year ago, acting as Supply and Transport Officer, he was in a position to acquaint himself pretty thoroughly with regard to the condition of the Indians in that district especially, and as soon as he fairly enters upon his new labors, I am sure the Indian Department will be greatly benefited by his carefully weighed suggestions.

The Canadian Indian of the far west is not necessarily warlike. With a few well proven exceptions, and which were confined to the Cree of the North Saskatchewan last year, our Indians have always been on good terms with the settlers.

The Bloods and the Blackfeet have been especially well behaved towards the white settlers.

A far western journal finds great fault with the Government because pay a visit to Crowfoot in the Blackfoot country. More good is likely to result from this visit than evil, and I have a shrewd suspicion that those who are overlooking Indian affairs in the far west are fully aware of this, and instead of looking upon this fraternal visit as one of deadly significance justly regard it as an evidence of the red man's respect for the Government which has unbounded faith in the loyalty of one chief and the fullest assurance that the other has fully repented of the mistake he made last spring. That the Dominion Government are showing commendable alacrity in addressing themselves to the Indian question is quite evident in the light of recent events, and it is most gratifying not only from a humanitarian standpoint but also from that of the intending immigrant.—The Emigrant.

THE TRAVIS CASE.

Calgary, July 5.—The Travis commission has at last closed. At the conclusion of Mr. Bleeker's speech, which was an able effort, E. P. Davis took up the legal points raised in the case, contending that in the Calgary matter the stipendiary had no jurisdiction to try for any contempt not committed in the face of the court. He argued also that Travis had no power to interfere with the voters' list as he had done, it being specially stipulated in an ordinance that their decision would not be maintained. The charges of the prosecution of Murdoch, Bleeker, Cayley and Davis were clearly proven, and malice shown beyond a doubt. The stipendiary addressed the commissioner in his own defence for three hours. He said the judge had a good sample on this trial of the vilification which had been heaped upon him by the petitioners since his arrival in Calgary. He had been maligned, not only in the Territories, but all over the Dominion, in the vilest manner, and had borne all patiently. He felt sure that no other judge in Canada would have acted as he did under the circumstances, but would have imposed an extreme penalty. In no case had any favoritism been shown by him, and he had never done any wrong action. He took up each charge and justified the findings in every matter that had come under his notice since he entered on his judicial duties and the documentary evidence put in proved that in every statement he made he had endeavored to do his duty faithfully and fearlessly, and he believed he had done it and stood this day with a clear conscience in the face of his fellowmen, and in the eyes of One very much higher, and was sustained by the mass of the respectable members of the community, and even his enemies had admitted the same. Judge Taylor then thanked the counsel for the courtesy they had shown during the conduct of the case and thanks were also returned to his Lordship by Mr. Bleeker, stipendiary Travis, E. C. Davis and the commission closed.

NORTHWEST CENTRAL.

Clemow, McDonald & Company, Manning & McDonald and the Manitoba & Northwestern Company who offered to construct the Northwest Central have each signified their intention of putting up the required deposit by Monday.

The contract for the construction of the Northwest Central railway has been awarded to Manning, McDonald and Co. They have not yet made the required deposit of $50,000.

Prince Albert Times: The Edmonton Bulletin says that since Mr. Dewdney became Lieutenant-Governor of the Northwest, the mounted police "have deteriorated from the finest in the world to a nondescript institution, neither fish, flesh nor good red herring." But what has his Honor to do with the mounted police? As well charge him with being responsible for the silly utterances of the Bulletin man.

—Fire works of all kinds at The Progress Store.

The Dances in Copenhagen have adopted rigorous prohibition measures. The number of taverns is reduced from 1,350 to 300; no female waiters are allowed; no liquor to be sold to any person under eighteen years of age, or who is intoxicated; and all drunken persons to be taken home in a close carriage at the expense of the landlord who sold them the last glass.

Detective Butler, of Boston, is in Ottawa in connection with the counterfeiting of Canadian notes, which he says is extensively carried on. He also wants to extradite Josh Racine.

The Hounded Not the Warning.

Her mother told her not to marry until she thought she was able to support her husband. But she heeded not her mother's warning. She went and got civilly contracted to a man who was a fine, long-winded talker, who could sit around and keep a stove warm better than any one she had ever seen in her life. And then how profitable he was lying in bed snoring on a December morning, while she got up and made the fire, fed the horses, split the wood, swept the floor, boiled the coffee, blackened his boots, mended that hole in his coat, sewed on that button, laid a pipe full of tobacco and some matches along side of his pillow, and how loving she must have felt toward him when he got up at last, about ten o'clock, turned her for making a noise, and wanted to know why there was no breakfast and eggs on the table, and why she had not pawned her watch (it was her dying mother's gift) in order to give him whiskey money. And when, after three years of this, she left him and went to work as a sewing girl, people spoke of the depravity of a woman who left her husband. — Texas Oylings.

ON SAMENESS.

Perhaps one of the leading differences between the thought of Americans and of old countrymen lies in the fact that the American preaches the one sermon—to do a single thing and to do it well—while the man on the other hemisphere believes that there are a number of activities for the mind and body, the neglect of any of which activities would dwarf and narrow the man and shorten his days.

If an American start to do anything, he goes at it with such a force, he thinks of it so incessantly, that after three weeks he is blood-poisoned with it. He starts to build a house. From that moment earth, air, and man become his enemies. A rainy day is the wrath of the Creator instead of His beneficence. All bricks come to be odious, and all mortar mud; hard things crumble, while the soft-hearted contractor grows stern and unyielding. The building goes up slowly; the debt piles heavenward of a night. In a month the unhappy builder cannot speak or think of houses with a tranquil mind, because there is a rut in his brain; the road is out of order; there should be a poll-tax. He advises his friends never to build, just as, after a year of wedlock, he advises them never to marry. His friend buys a house already built. He goes into it with plumber, painter, carpenter, paper-hanger, mason, gardener, boiler, tinner, and gasman. In a month he comes out and warns all mankind never to buy to build.

A well-to-do man of business is invited to write an address for the alumni of the academy whence he graduated years ago with honors which prove to have been worthily bestowed. Instead of sitting down and giving a valuable picture of his own life and its lesson, the gentleman, as it were, "relaxes house" within the chambers of his brain. He reads everything in feverish haste—he buys new cerebral furniture, carpets, and hangings, and redecorates the premises. Then he shuts himself up, alarms his wife, who apprehends an apoplectic attack, meets the enemy and the enemy are his. Yet the great address smells new and varnished. As for your orator, the very word "address" drives away his returning appetite. Oh! he did it! Yes, Americans always do a thing when they set out to do it, but does it pay? Is not the system wrong? Should the mind be a glass, always burning in to the life's force—a lath, cutting beautifully into human contentment? Shall it profit the pillar to be exequiated if it be weakened with every convolution?

The walker tells six days and nights, and a city full of people cheer him on. He covers 600 miles. He sails to London and walks there six days. He comes back and must now walk 600 miles in six days, as, by additional torture, other Americans have found it could be accomplished. Never a public demand for moderation; triumph with moderation would not be spicy enough. Is it not an outcome of our national craze for monopoly?

The ethics of American thought and industry even clutch the reward of a well-spent life from the grasp of old age. The man of affairs finds himself beyond the need of money. Suppose he sell out and retire; it is collapse; it is death. The subject in Poe's tale had been kept animated for many months by a magnetic force. The force was withdrawn suddenly, and the subject crumbled to ashes. The man of affairs must return to business or he will perish the same way. He must die in the harness. It is the wages of American success—the triumph of specialism and concentration.

The misleading possibilities of monomania have lured all America into a state of threat—a sort of death-watch—which seems to be visiting its evil effects mainly on the young. When diphtheria enters a house, one, two, and sometimes three little children fall away. The mother's health is shattered, or she loses her wits, but the community or the street comes to speak of the horror in a few weeks.

One day Smith and Miss Biddle Mc-Ginlin were taking a moonlight stroll on the beach at Galveston one night last week, when Gus remarked: "How pale the moon looks tonight." "You'd be five times as pale if you had to be up more or less, one night after the other, for a week or more at a time." — Texas Oylings.

The Stage Coach in New York City.

When the railroad car took the place of the slow stage-coach, it deprived travel of most of its pleasure. One sees but little of the country as he is whirled rapidly through it amid noise and dust. There is no way in which scenery can be so well enjoyed, as from an outside seat of a stage-coach. The moderate rate of speed allows all the beauties of the scene to be appreciated, and the changes of the road present an ever-varying panorama. Then the stage-coach allowed of social enjoyment, and chat and stories made the time pass pleasantly. What a contrast between the tavern, where the stage-passengers stopped for dinner, and the present railway station with its "five minutes for refreshment." There is so much that is pleasant and enjoyable in travel by stage that wealthy gentlemen in New York City and vicinity not long ago formed a coaching club, each member of which had a "coach and four." There are now many members of the club. Each has a coach made in the best possible style. The body of each and the running gear is painted in a different style from the others. The horses are carefully selected, and have the most complete harness and trappings. The coaches have seats for six upon the roof, besides a place for the "guard," who with his horn announces the arrival of the coach. The driver is usually the owner of the coach, and there is no little friendly rivalry among the members over their skill in "handling the ribbons." A pride of the coaching club is something well worth seeing, and the club makes occasional excursions to more or less distant points. On one occasion its members, or a part of them, drove to Philadelphia and back, by the stage-route followed before the days of railroads. One member of the club is so enthusiastic a coachman that he runs a daily coach between one of the hotels of this city and a point in the suburbs. He takes passengers at a round price, and thus allows those who are not members of the club to enjoy the pleasures of this mode of traveling. He popular is the Tally-ho Coach that places are engaged many days ahead. The passenger of the coach leaves the city by that beautiful gateway, Central Park, and sees the city melt gradually into the country. His road takes him past beautiful villas as well as primitive farm houses. His senses are soon lulled by the refreshing sea air, and he arrives at his destination prepared to do justice to the ample dinner that awaits him. His destination is Pelham Bay, one of the most charming spots upon Long Island Sound. He here exchanges the varying scenes and sights of the road for one of tranquil beauty. The blue waters of the Sound stretch out in front of him, and the many sailing craft go lazily by, their quiet being in strange contrast to the busy life of the city that occasionally passes. After a few hours of rest at Pelham Bay, the homeward journey is commenced, and the passenger enjoys the same scene in the light of the declining sun, and reaches the starting point just as gas-lights and electric lamps are replacing the daylight, refreshed by the novel mode of travel and the change of air and scene. "But," some may say, "it is very expensive." So it is, but unlike many of the amusements of the wealthy, every dollar expended by the Coaching Club helps some one. The coach maker, the painter, the harness maker, and many other trades are benefited, and even the farmer, who breeds stage horses, has their value increased by what some regard as the extravagance of the Coaching Club. — American Agriculturist.

Great Engineering Projects.

This is an age of mighty international engineering enterprises. Sir R. M. Stephenson is organizing a company in England for connecting Europe by railway with Persia, India, Burmah and China. A concession has been obtained from the Sublime Porte, and the Asia Minor and Persia sections of the enterprise are to be first prosecuted. Russia has already constructed a railroad through Central Asia that is now within a few hundred miles of the frontier of Hindoostan. The beginning of the twentieth century will see every populous part of Asia intersected by a railway, and it is probable also that by that time steam will have been superseded by electricity. Another great project is the proposed piercing of the Pyrenees by a gigantic railway tunnel. Within a comparatively few years the Alps have been pierced by three tunnels, so that there is no longer any natural barrier between Italy and the rest of Europe. The same will be true of Spain in a few years. The project for uniting England with France by a tunnel under the British Channel is not dead; but the prosecution of the work has been postponed, not on account of any engineering or financial difficulty in the way, but because of the fears of the English people of a possible French invasion. — Economist's Monthly.

A crematory is to be built at Buffalo, N. Y., modeled after the famous one at Milan. No flame, but intense heat, will be used to reduce the body to ashes. The high temperature is achieved through pipes from a movable heater, which will be connected with the furnace. The required heat by this method must be eight hundred degrees, and it will take four hours to reduce a body to ashes. — Buffalo Express.

What's all this I hear about the Mother Hubbards? What are they, anyway? — "O, they are doctors that are not pleasing to the faculties. What's them? They seem to be afraid of them." — "Women wear them in the East, too. Don't they?" — "O, yes, they're worn all over." — "Have you ever seen anything in them to be afraid of?" — "Yes, my wife." — Rochester Post-Express.

—During the past week we have had a few thunder showers, but to late and not sufficient to do the crops much good. Though the dry weather has been hard on the growing crops, it is the opinion of many that the gophers have done more harm than the dry weather, and that there would have been a fair yield but for the ravages of that destructive little animal. Mr. T. Wright is, however, of the opinion that it is not the gophers that have cut the wheat down but an insect working in the stalk near the ground. Whatever is doing the damage, it certainly is very serious. Acres upon acres of wheat have been cut down as if cut with a knife. While Mr. Wright says it is an insect, others say it is because of the excessive dry weather that gophers cannot get water to drink and that they bite off the wheat stalks to suck out the juice, and thus cut down a large amount every day. Careful investigation should be made, and if it is the gophers they should be exterminated as speedily as possible. We gave a receipt last week which will prove effectual in disposing of them. If the damage is caused by an insect its habits should be studied, so as to guard against it if possible.

General Superintendent Egan states in reference to the reported outbreak of smallpox in the Mountains that General Superintendent Abbott of the Pacific division and the physician in charge of the men inform him that there were two cases of smallpox there. One of the patients died and the other has fully recovered. Every precaution necessary was taken to prevent the spread of the disease, and it appears they have been very successful, considering the number of men, some four or five thousand, as there were no other cases. Mr. Egan also says that the Lieutenant-Governor of the Northwest had everything ready to prevent parties coming to from the West or British Columbia before they were properly inspected or vaccinated.

PERPETUAL MOTION.

A wonderful discovery was made on Monday by Mr. Robt. Reeves, which will revolutionize the locomotion of machinery in the near future. The discovery was made by throwing a plough point on to the tread-board of a dog churn, the instant the point touched the board it revolved one-half turn. Mr. Reeves could see "perpetual motion" at once. The tread-board of the churn requires very little weight on the side to set it in motion. The discoverer thereupon obtained a wheel-barrow and placed the wheel upon the side of the board and secured the handles firmly to a beam in the machinery hall. Everything ready the brakes were loosened and the board began to revolve, the wheel of the barrow travelling up hill, serving the same purpose as the tread of a dog. We understand word was immediately sent to Ottawa to secure a patent. There is a standing bounty of $500,000 offered by Queen Victoria to the discoverer of perpetual motion, and steps will be taken to secure this premium. The machine can be seen in motion by all who wish call. We congratulate Mr. R. on his discovery, and trust he will be fortunate enough to secure this handsome bounty.—Mitchell, Ont., Advertiser.
